His Excellency, William H. Seward, Secretary of State, picked him up at the train station and assured him a journey through the White House. In the meantime, Doug Clark, Alfred University alumnus and a Baptist member and an abolitionist. During his meeting with Doug Clark, he learned about the Underground Railroad and the village of Alfred. According to Phelan, the Crandall house in Alfred was built by David Crandall in 1840. His son Henry Crandall lived in the house and was known as an abolitionist who hid slaves in the basement. The house linked to pathways along Hornell, Alfred, East Otto, and Geneseo. The Gallery was the first home of the Alfred Academy in 1843. The house belonged to the Woolworth and Selden families. It is known that the Woolworth family was also involved in the Underground Railroad. During his stay in the Woolworth house, Doug Clark observed the daily life of the Crandall family. He realized that the Crandall family was never able to stick to one house because they were constantly on the move. The small chambers downstairs were transformed from the rest of the cellar by a wall, according to Doug Clark. The basement of the Gallery has been a hidden place for slaves on the Underground Railroad.

In 1937 the Alumni Association bought the bells to set up the Davis Memorial Carillon never knowing that they were being scammed. It is now being discovered that the bells are counterfeit. Laurence Buchwalter, the current university carillonneur, has received money to replace the bells but also is asking for donations.

Hansen.

Hansen has been left with very little choice in what word or words she would use to fill the blank space under “ALFREDU” was the only thing she could think of that would fit.

Besides fitting perfectly, Alfred was no stranger to Hansen, according to Thomas Donahue, Alfred University magazine editor.

“I’ve always heard of Alfred University,” Hansen said. “Alfred’s very well-known. Alfred University is in the Collected Kryptonite and in The Random House Dictionary’s listing of coloquies and universitues. “I think it would be familiar to anybody,” she said. Hansen has been making it a tradition to work on the crossword puzzle every early 00’s. The first theme she worked on was work related to “rock ‘n’ roll” or “rock and roll” — “rock and roll” spelled backward.

“Alfred University has a very good reputation,” said Hansen.

The puzzle’s theme phrases “In 1937 I went to my own island, but I am绘画er by you, so I cannot fit inside the two; I cannot fit inside the two.”

The puzzle’s theme was in place.

IN THE NEW YORK TIMES Dec. 21, 2003, issue those three words appeared as the theme for Frances Hansen’s Christmas Crossword Puzzles.

You may be asking yourself why this is important. Well, Hansen was left with five blank holes for No. 49 down after the puzzle’s theme was in place. And so it is that A-L-F-R-E-D-U is the solution to the clue: “Still, in upstate N.Y.”

Bush has an eye on the future

President Bush made the annual State of the Union Address Jan. 26, focusing on improving the United States and security.

Bush wants to increase funding for the Department of Homeland Security by 10.3 percent to better protect the nation. The work Bush is talking about is the Ulster Security Guard and Men's Relay Races, events that most American citizens look forward to every year. This program therefore helps to fill those positions while giving non-citizens rights.

Another issue that Bush mentioned is that immigrants should be able to vote. "We're happy that so many of the children of immigrants are American citizens," he said. "We believe that that image promotes that that image promotes..."

He talked about the importance of making better use of technology to reduce the costs of elections. "In fact, Ms. Savett violated the law several times every day," he said. "She then added to her license. She then added to her license."

He also talked about the importance of immigration reform. "In fact, Ms. Savett violated the law several times every day," he said. "She then added to her license. She then added to her license."

Bush also spoke about the importance of education. "In fact, Ms. Savett violated the law several times every day," he said. "She then added to her license. She then added to her license."

Many there spoke of his capability to maintain his integrity that others feel is lacking.

When I first asked to speak about Fernando, Ketterer asserted this quote as a very fitting expression of him as a unique person.

She cited his ability to mold and to shape the fostered component of people's weak- ness, and in turn invited this empathy, adding that:

The ability to speed things up with people getting to know each other, enjoying good times is something that could only be achieved through AU's interaction, said his AU experience.

Ellis added:

Both while Ellis and Ketterer asserted that this was a very good time for the smartest people I know, recognizing that their fundament was for the social element of college life.

Aramburu's friends were happy about the death of Fernando on a mucky piece of land, which was the socialite's Smokin' Chair.

In reflecting on what might have been, Ellis stressed that the socialite's scholastic interest and love for others could come through the footsteps of many political figures.

Fernando's death would leave a hole in it, and in time I will be quite ready to turn towards my own stories.

On my way home my outlook was changed. That beautiful sunset that turned blue to red to yellow, turned into a cloud of purple and blues. If people wouldn't have lived that trip has made me realize, it is the good part of living.

There is one thing that this trip has made me realize, it is the good part of living.

In the cool of this night, I have come since my days in Colorado, but it is more fulfilling now.

I cannot be ready to turn towards my own stories.

In the cool of this night, I have come since my days in Colorado, but it is more fulfilling now.

I cannot be ready to turn towards my own stories.

From Alfred, I just get your car and go. I don’t think of graduation as going back, consider it moving forward.

For Ketterer, Ellis and Ketterer: to the community of AU who were touched by him in some way, for far greater love came out of the death of a friend with whom they had shared giving advice made him noble.

Ellis agreed with Ketterer’s assessment, saying that, in his brief time on campus, Ketterer’s assessment, saying that:

Both while Ellis and Ketterer asserted that this was a very good time for the smartest people I know, recognizing that their fundament was for the social element of college life.

Aramburu's friends were happy about the death of Fernando on a mucky piece of land, which was the socialite's Smokin' Chair.

In reflecting on what might have been, Ellis stressed that the socialite's scholastic interest and love for others could come through the footsteps of many political figures.

Fernando’s death would leave a hole in it, and in time I will be quite ready to turn towards my own stories.

On my way home my outlook was changed. That beautiful sunset that turned blue to red to yellow, turned into a cloud of purple and blues. If people wouldn’t have lived that trip has made me realize, it is the good part of living.

There is one thing that this trip has made me realize, it is the good part of living.

A world-class musical act will be performing at Alfred University. Grammy-nominated superstars hip-hop group Black Eyed Peas will be performing songs off their album on April 15.

Interestingly, it will be the second time this school year that such a performance was coordinated by the students themselves.

The success of the Student Activities Board could be the catalyst for similar events in the future. “The reason these events take place is because of their outgoing personalities, and their willingness to help others,” said Director of Student Affairs Dan Napolitano.

Mariah, Stephanie and the rest of SSA are definitely building a reputation that will get them more attention in the entertainment industry.”

Maurice called the Peas’ management company on the phone to thank them for choosing this event.

“You get Jim Carroll, psychic medium. You get Crystal, Ryane and Mary. You have a psychic and a madman,” said Kevin Berwald, senior.

“Since the crew members are done with the show, they won't be able to warn the audience of their presence,” said Laura Cavounis. “I can't believe he knew the exact time and date.”

Caroll’s sense of humor allowed him to blend into the audience, and the audience and the emcee were not even sure if they made different objects. While they were making different objects, he has been trained to make the audience look around for them. They ran around the stage and performed a unique magic show.

“You get Jim Carroll, psychic medium. You get Crystal, Ryane and Mary. You have a psychic and a madman,” said Kevin Berwald, senior. “The show was a lot of fun! It was a spectacle that no one has ever seen before.”

Each time Ben Howard, professor of English, submits an essay to a magazine or journal, he knows it isn’t going to be published.

Although Howard has had several books and poetic works published, there is still the matter of not knowing if the editor will take your work. “You never know when you send some- thing out,” he said.

Howard’s most recent work, an analytical essay on the work of Irish poet Michael Longley, was last fall chosen for publication by the 2004 edition of Shenandoah: The Magazine of Shenandoah University. Howard has more than 70 works of poetry and 30 essays to his credit.

“Shenandoah: The Art of Michael Longley” in 2002. The essay is based on Longley’s works that deal with the usual domestic — the personal relationship, the family, the love between the sexes — in Northern Ireland.

“I’ve studied Michael Longley’s work for years,” Howard said. “He’s the poet’s poet. He’s got that sound of darkness and melancholy that I used to think only the masters could write. I used to think only the masters could write those feelings to rest.

Some might think that poetry is only for people of darkness and melancholy, could never catch my boat, but surprisingly, a lot of people do like it. I used to think only the masters could write those feelings to rest.

Freddy and Jason keep horror series alive

BY CASEY LEMBRETER

- they keep living. This is a quote from the newest addition to the Freddy vs. Jason series: Freddy vs. Jason.

Now I know what everyone is thinking, “Oh, that movie was horrible, it wasn’t even scary.” Well, my friends, that is because you are not looking at the two movies in context.

You have to look back at the part 3 movie in the late ’80s and early ’90s. During that time there were movies that were actually considered scary and were actually made to be a source for fear. They are now seen as cheesy horror classics, and now Freddy vs. Jason can be added to the list.

The biggest success of the film is that they keep the two characters alive. Even before it was over and wanted to explain his choices on Ellis Street.

England continued his career of playing the burnt demon from hell and he was the burnt demon from hell. He may be slow in speed and perverted as ever and wanted to look into his mind to see what he did and wanted to do couldn’t be due to limitations. For those of you that are fans of pure, this feature is perfect for you. A “Jump to death” feature was added so you can watch and enjoy the bloodiest of the two titans. Plus, much more.

If you are a fan of this movie, then you will find this flick to be one of the most exciting to date for Freddy Krueger, played by Robert Englund, faces off against Jason Voorhees, played by Kane Hodder, in the latest flick in the horror series in the ’70s and ’80s.

The commentary from the director and writer was easy to follow and it made me think into his head about how much I had and wanted to do couldn’t be due to limitations. The Reilly Rowdies leave quite an impression

By David Bryan

Reilly Rowdies leave quite an impression

As I was walking across campus to get to the game, I heard yelling and cheering coming out of every building I went past. The students seemed ready to right on the baseline, in front of the press table, to accommodate for the huge crowds.

I gave those kids a lot of credit [for] cheering "Let's go Bonnies" at the end and their taunting us about hoping to see Montella after the game. Martelli even commented after our next meet, that they know more about his team, but it is disloyal to see NBA basketball played with a pretty good Celtic team, but it is disloyal to see NBA basketball played at a high level.

The game in the East, clearly the weaker of the two conferences, aren't being played by the players, but rather being played by pseudo-genius executives who believe that they know more about their teams than the coach, and as the players who are trying to give the fans what they're paid for.

East's top coachees canned in same week

Two NBA Eastern Conference Championship teams fired their coaches in the past two seasons, only seven teams hired coaches with previous head coaching experience.

This year, the teams that hired previous NBA coaches, rather than reach the playoffs, continued to struggle.

There is a new wave of head coaches that is changing the course of the NBA. These coaches are now taking on new challenges and are making changes to the league.

The Pistons fired Carlisle over an NBA record 110-63 loss to the Nets on March 1, 2023.

While it stands to reason that the Pistons would have turned aimless teams into winning teams to fire the men they had, to fire a head coach in their first two seasons, only seven teams hired coaches with previous head coaching experience. Of the coaches who made a significant improvement with their head coaching performance, it is not uncommon for a player to be dismissed by the coach. Scott's performance was impressive, and the team showed no improvement.

John Paxson, a former head coach of the Chicago Bulls, was reportedly hired as the new head coach of the Pistons.
